ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Community Celebration of Shakespeare Tercentenary. The plans for the celebration of the Shakespeare Tercentenary are progressing most satisfactorily, and much enthusiasm is shown by those who are working for the various parts.

As it would be impossible to give whole plays and equally difficult to choose a typical glay, one or two scenes from some of the most familiar will be given.

scenes from some of the most familiar will be given.

Books and pictures have been studied to make the presentation as accurate as possible. The costumes will be from a well known costumer in Boston. No pains have been spared to reproduce an Elizabethan performance with as many of the entertainments as possible that pleased an audence in Shakespeare's day. Shepherdesses will entrance us by the music of their pipes; old time dances are to be revived, and we hope the jester, too, will tickle our fancy.

No Elizabethan festival was complete without refreshments, and one plete without refreshments, and one of the Academy teachers is to preside over a booth where all sorts of tempt-ing things will be for sale; Shrewsbury cakes made from genuine English recipes; Banbury tarts and honey cakes, also from old time English cook books; and last but not least, real su-

DAVIS THEATRE

Entire New Show Today-Keith Head. line Vaudeville, Triangle Plays and Keystone Comedies.

For the midweek change of program the Davis promises one of the best vaudeville and photoplay bills of the vaudeville and photoplay bills of the season. The headline attraction is Corbet, Shepard and Donovan, three men and a piano, who prezent a snappy comedy, singing and musical offering that will be the talk of the town after the first performance today. They dress well, are excellent singers and for all round clever entertainers this act would be hard to beat. The second act is Cervo, a piano accordionist, and is conceded to be the greatest artist in the world on this particular instrument. The third and last act is King & Ward, who present a novel comedy skit, called the Country Girl and the City Chap. They carry their own special scenery and keep their own special scenery and keep everyone in laughter while they occupy the stage. Altogether for a three-act combination, this bill cannot be equaled anywhere for the money.

The Triangle photoplay feature on this bill is called Sold for Marriage, a five-part Griffith production, with Lillian Gish as the star. This is a strong dramatic picture and comes up to standard of all Griffith supervised to standard of all Griffith supervised. productions. To complete the program and send everyone home with a smile on their face, Fatty Arbuckle will be seen in the two-reel Keystone comedy, The Other Man. This is positively the funniest film this popular comedian has ever comedian has ever appeared in. Mat-inee at 2.15. All seats 10 cents; ev-ening at 6.45 and 8.45, admission 10 and 15c, reserved seats 20c. Special music by the Davis concert orchestra at every performance.

THE COLONIAL.

The feature picture at the Colo-nial today is The Primitive Strain, an Essanay drama in three parts. The cast includes John Harris, a minister cast includes John Harris, a minister (Edward Arnoid); Marie, his half sister (Neil Craig); Dan McGraw, a sater (Neil Craig); Dan McGraw, a sater (Neil Craig). The Wayville Slumber Party, Lubin drama, Willie Stayed Single, Vitagraph drama, are two other pictures. The Watertank Plot, a Kalem drama, and When Husbands Go to War, Mina, comedy, end today's big program. Matinee 5c, evening 10c. New show every day.

Hollisters in Runaway Accident. The Rev. Frederick M. Hollister of Wilson, formerly pastor of the Congregational church in North Stonington, with his wife and daughter, figured in a runaway accident Sunday afternoon. They were returning from a service held in a private house on Grumman Hill, and at the top of the hill the shafts dropped down, striking the horse's legs, and frightening the animal; the horse ran and at the bottom of the hill the wagon, a two-seated surrey, overturned, throwing out the occupants.

Mr. Hollister was uningured, and Mrs. Hollister suffered only temporarily from the shock, but Miss Hollister's foot was crushed and her ankle wrenched. Both are however, doing well, no further injury developing. The Rev. Frederick M. Hollister of

THE SONG OF THE TROUT.

Where the river dashes, and foams and flashes,
And runs and ripples, and slides and slides.

I dart and double through froth and bubble,
And catch the sun on my reinbow, sides.

Awhile I jolly the bait 'tis folly To dangle over my twinkling nose, Then away I hurry, with flirt and flurry,
To the sindowed pool of my safe repose.

When buds are greening on branches leaning
Above the stream where I love to sport.
In the sweet spring weather, with rods they gather,
And sil with patience to pay me And sil with patience to court.

With creels of wicker, and flasks of liquor.

And silken flies in a little book.

They come and wrangle, and cast an angle.

But I'm much too wary to get the hook.
